

Yi2
7400
F 16

Introductory lecture upon the duties of physicians to each other. Delivered Novem<sup>r</sup> 2<sup>d</sup> 1822

Gentlemen,

The duties of morality ~~are all of a positive~~ ~~nature~~ extend to every situation, and relations and to all the circumstances of life. A soldier upon his death bed at Sicondeoga during the revolutionary war, sent for his Colonel, and asked him, if he had done his duty as a soldier. "Yes" said his Colonel, - and faithfully too. "Then" said he, "I die satisfied". Every profession like that of a Soldier, has its appropriate ~~and~~ and specific duties, which require to be made known, and enforced. This remark applies in a peculiar manner to the profession of medicine. A Physician may be just in private life, faithful to his patients, but deficient in all the duties they owe <sup>to each other.</sup> ~~to each other.~~ This

✓ Let it not be supposed gentlemen, that I mean to assume the Office of a legislator upon this occasion. I am alike unequal and indisposed to such an undertaking. My only qualification to point out the duties I have mentioned, is founded upon having been a Spectator for more than half a Century of the good effects of performing, and <sup>of</sup> the extensive evils of neglecting them.

~~The Design of the present Lecture is to~~ point out those duties, and to suggest enquiries to

✓ ~~The~~ The words of Dr Sydenham are <sup>an</sup> excellent lesson to physicians upon this Subject: "were a medicine offered to me (says this great & good man) that would cure all the diseases of the human body, upon condition that I should keep the Composition of it a secret, I would refuse to accept of it."

Their Obligations to discharge those duties are founded upon the same Authority as those which they owe to their God and their neighbour; ~~and~~ <sup>but</sup> if this were not the case, they are imperiously called upon to perform them by the <sup>necessity</sup> ~~obligation~~ of cooperation in <sup>of</sup> sturdy sympathy in labor, and reci=procal Aid and support, in order to exercise their profession with Advantage to themselves, and to protect it from the prejudices and Unkindness of the World. ~~That~~ The design of the present lecture is to point out those duties, and to suggest motives for ~~carrying~~ inducing them to practice.

I The first duty, I shall mention that is im-=crumbent upon physicians, is to <sup>to each other</sup> communicate all the knowledge they acquire by reading, or ob=servation. ~~to each other~~ In a profession in which truth is acquired with so much difficulty, and in which its application is <sup>of so much</sup> ~~so~~ important, this duty cannot be omitted with increasing guilt in a greater or less degree. V

[Faint, illegible handwriting in a cursive script, likely from an 18th-century manuscript. The text is written in brown ink on aged, yellowed paper. The script is dense and fills most of the page, with some lines appearing more distinct than others. The paper shows signs of wear, including creases and discoloration.]

cities and Villages and in some parts of our country of whole Districts to meet weekly, monthly or quarterly for the purpose of informing each other of every thing new they had respectively met with in the course of their reading or practice. ~~For~~ Such Associations have existed in many parts of the world, and have always attended with great individual and public benefit.

Physicians
 II. They should exercise the strictest justice & candour towards each others professional Characters. They should contradict all such calumnies as they know & believe to be ~~void~~ without foundation, and where they are not satisfied that this is the case, they should inform each other of them, in order that ~~they~~ they may be refuted, ~~where~~ where a brother has erred in

~~✓ The honor of which as dear to a ✓ and this should always be considered as the physician's protected and cherished by a physician with as much care as if it were his private property.~~

✓ ~~Things~~ which should always be considered as a part of our property, and ~~his~~ opinions or practice, no advantage should be taken <sup>either of in order</sup> of ~~them~~ to injure his reputation or business. His errors are probably the errors of the profession. ~~By concealing them~~ they ~~errors~~, we protect the honor of our profession, & ~~therefore we promote~~ <sup>we thereby</sup> ~~protect~~ <sup>promote</sup> our ~~own~~ <sup>our</sup> interest, as well as that of ~~our~~ <sup>our</sup> ~~our~~ <sup>mistaken</sup> ~~brothers~~ brother. This the truth of this remark was ~~was~~ obvious in this city in the year 1793. The publications which were intended to injure individual physicians only, affected the credit of the science of medicine generally, to such a degree, that many people died without sending for a physician, or recovered by ~~the~~ trusting to nature, or the common place remedies of their friends, or cusses.

~~From this fact, we see that if~~ ~~of erroral considerations will not deter~~

<sup>or</sup> <sup>1:</sup> V<sup>o</sup> The first question to be determined <sup>under</sup> ~~on~~ this head is, what qualifications in ~~the~~ practitioners of ~~medicine~~ <sup>physic</sup> should entitle them to be met in a sick room? If an-swer, a regular education in medicine without any regard to a medical title.
 But <sup>there</sup> are cases in which a consultation should not be objected <sup>even</sup> to with quacks, if mean where ~~patients~~ <sup>will not consent</sup> ~~very~~ <sup>to</sup> ~~be~~ <sup>their</sup> ~~hands to give~~ to dismiss them, and where the loss of ~~the~~ life may be <sup>the</sup> consequence of not rescuing them out of their hands.
 This need not prevent our ~~exposing~~ <sup>their</sup> ~~them~~ <sup>ignorance</sup> at other times, and doing every thing that lies in our power to obtain, and ex--cute laws to <sup>expel</sup> ~~exclude~~ them from the ranks of our profession.

5

~~and errors~~ ~~ers from exposing the ignorance of their~~ ~~personal interest should have that effect, for~~ ~~brethren, let us suspect before that we cannot~~ ~~injure them,~~
~~but without indirectly injuring ourselves.~~

III As the principal intercourse of physicians with each other is in consultations, I shall make a few remarks upon the conduct which should regulate them. V

2 In ~~the~~ all consultations ~~that~~ the aid of further medical advice is suggested either by the physician himself, or by the friends of patients, or his friends. ~~The~~ In the former case, the physician has a right to name that person to assist <sup>him</sup>, whose principles & modes of practice accord most with his own, and in whose honor he has full confidence. In the latter case, a physician has a right to object to a consultation

7 with a person ~~whose~~ in whom those pre-requisites to harmony and success do not take place: I consider this as One of the prerogatives of a physician which should never be surrendered either to the importu-nities or power of a patient, and where it cannot be maintained, a physician should retire and leave his patient to <sup>the consulting</sup> ~~the~~ physician whom ~~he~~ <sup>he</sup> has preferred. This is an act of ~~equal~~ reciprocal justice, and no blame should be incurred by it on either side. The ill consequences of ~~it~~ such a step (if any should occur) will be far less, than a consultation, or rather a Controversy between two phy-sicians of ~~of~~ discordant opinions, and nodes of ~~the~~ practice, and who are secretly

V Occupy the same rank in our principles and conduct as Veracity and justice. Its importance will be greatly enhanced by attending to the serious consequences of neglecting to practise it, for the = 8 hostile confidentially to each other. —

by the preliminaries of a Consultation being 3: ~~a Consultation being agreed~~ thus settled, the next duty ~~has to do~~ physicians owe to each other is punctuality in <sup>complying</sup> ~~visiting~~ with their engagements to visit their patients exactly at the same time. In the common Affairs of life, punctuality in business, has been called a minor <sup>virtue</sup>, but in the practice of Medicine it is a virtue of <sup>the first magnitude, and should</sup> ~~the first magnitude, and should~~ ~~neglect~~ <sup>is often</sup> of it ~~is~~ attended with the consequences of a vice of the worst kind. ~~that is one of which~~ ~~is the loss of life~~. Every <sup>time</sup> ~~being~~ a physician violates an engagement with one of his brethren, he robs him of that which was not his own, that is of minutes, or hours devoted to successive appointments, and thereby detracts from his reputation, as well as endangers the lives of his patients. I am not singular in the <sup>importance</sup> ~~high rank~~ which I have attached to this virtue. A noble ~~craftsman~~ <sup>craftsman</sup> in England had so high a sense of the moral ob-ligation of punctuality, that he once said "Had I agreed to meet one of the poorest of my tenants at a certain hour in a remote wood, only for the purpose of playing puola pin, no considerations should induce me to disappoint him!" I have mentioned this anecdote in an address to the graduates in medicine in the year 1810, but it is to repeat with good sense and justice that it cannot be mentioned too often, nor too deeply imprinted upon the memory of a physician.

It is a <sup>4th</sup> ~~second~~ duty which physicians owe to each other <sup>in consultations</sup> is civility. In their meetings ✓ Too much importance cannot be attached to them. They are the oil that causes the wheels of cultivated Society to move, not only without emitting ungrateful sounds, but to send forth musical tones. The Absence of them, constitutes one of the greatest evils of human life. Incivility in all its forms is a real and positive injury.

"Small slights, Contempt, neglect, unnoticed with hate, says the poet he breaks up in numbers, what they want in weight; and hence we <sup>often</sup> ~~generally~~ find they are followed on the part of the person who is the subject of them, with suspicion, coldness, Unkindness, and finally with open hostility and revenge. —

to consult together, ~~that~~ whether weekly, daily, or oftener, they should resort each other with the usual inquiries and Ceremonies which ~~create~~ nature has dictated, & custom sanctioned among all the civilized nations in the world. They should part from each other in the same manner. Where ~~any~~ <sup>the</sup> usual forms of good breeding are kept practised, it will be difficult for any Unkind feeling to enter the human heart. ~~and where they~~ ~~are not, the neglect of them is generally~~ ~~followed by~~ <sup>suspicion,</sup> coldness, Unkindness, and ~~open hostility.~~ I am the more disposed to urge the practice of civility in the intercourse of Physicians with each other from <sup>the recollection of the following</sup> ~~having~~ instance ~~found~~ <sup>and</sup> ~~of its~~ <sup>and obvious</sup> ~~and~~ <sup>its</sup> offensive nature, and ~~Conspicuous in this city.~~ Two physicians in this city were called to attend a patient at the same time.

One of them met his brother practitioner every morning ~~with the usual~~ for several days with the usual forms of respectful behaviour, and parted with him in the same manner. To these forms, no return was ever made. The physician who ~~was~~ treated with this indigence, with difficulty assumed the same mode of be-haviour, and for several weeks they met & parted daily without exchanging a word with -other, except <sup>upon</sup> the subject of this patient's disease. Not even a nod of the head indicated that they were ~~fellow~~ men. or members of the same human family. ~~One of~~ The physician

~~belonged~~ had 12 ~~reluctant~~ reluctantly apured who appeared to ~~belong to the human species~~ these brutish natives, remarked afterwards to one of his friends, that their conduct often reminded him of two horses <sup>emerging to</sup> ~~emerging to~~ this respective ~~state~~ adjoining stalls in a stable, after being ~~parted~~ <sup>separated</sup> during the day, and ~~parting from each other~~ ~~every morning~~ after without looking at any thing but their food, and ~~parting~~ receiving ~~this collar the next morning~~, and parting with each other <sup>the next morning</sup> without any other feeling, ~~or regret~~ than that which arose from having their manger and their rack.
In the ~~subduer~~ and insensibility of that physi-cian ~~which was thus~~ <sup>devoid of the</sup> ~~social~~ ~~manner of a human being~~ to the duties which he owed to his brother practitioners, there was no ~~subduer~~ to insensibility to the compensation he expected for his Visits to his patient. It was to his heart, what the ~~ro~~ ~~rest~~ and the manger are to the apper-

 -tile of the horse. —

The sick room of a patient should be ~~3 In entering a sick room, the physician who~~ ~~was called first, should always precede the~~

~~consult~~ considering as common property to both physicians as soon as a consulta-tion takes place. Neither of them in com-mon cases should ever enter it alone,

Except with the consent or advice of his brother <sup>practitioner</sup>. The physician first called, should always precede the consulting physician in entering this patient's room; — he should take the lead in asking questions relative to the patient's disease, and he should always deliver the prescriptions that are the results of the consultation. No ~~question~~ <sup>remedy</sup> not even

[Faint, illegible handwritten text, likely bleed-through from the reverse side of the page.]

a simple drink should be advised without the concurrence of both physicians, and even a question <sup>relative to an article of food,</sup> should not <sup>be</sup> answered by either of them, without first obtaining by a whisper or otherwise, the consent of the other. The physician who is first called, should always <sup>follow</sup> ~~precede~~ the consulting physician in leaving a sick room, <sup>but</sup> and upon no account remain <sup>in it alone</sup> ~~itself~~. Unless some service be required of him in which ~~does not require~~ the attendance of both physicians is not necessary.

b In dividing upon the medicines that are proper in the patient's case, great delicacy should be observed. Nothing like dictating should be practised by either party. ~~Even~~ Even age & experience should not authorize the the least departure from perfect equality and reciprocity in this part of physicians intercourse with others. Remedies should be proposed rather in questions, than by way of advice, and where they do not accord with a physician's judgment they should be opposed with delicacy, and where they are not far removed from what is deemed proper, they should be admitted, and where they are, they should be opposed with delicacy. ~~As for~~ These ~~acts~~ Duties are of much greater consequences than is generally supposed, ~~for~~ <sup>no</sup> there is ~~nothing~~ situation in which a physician feels himself more degraded than <sup>when he is</sup> treated like an apothecary in a consultation.

7 There are several separate duties that belong exclusively to the consulting physician.
He should never visit the patient without ✓ visit each other when sick, until they are sent for. A physician when individual has <sup>an equal</sup> ~~the same~~ right to choose the person to whom he shall commit the care of his life, ~~that~~ <sup>with</sup> a patient ~~has~~, and this can only be done by ~~giving~~ <sup>his brethren</sup> an ~~oppor-~~ ~~portunity to~~ <sup>never obtruding</sup> ~~avoiding~~ ~~intruding~~ visits, to him or prescriptions <sup>upon</sup> ~~for~~ him. Physicians should never

the physician who was first called, unless upon the occurrence of ~~an~~ <sup>an</sup> alarming symptom, and in the absence of the family physician from home. He should avoid the appearance of extraordinary solititude, apidity, or sympathy in the patient's case; - ~~he should~~ <sup>and should</sup> ~~trust~~ the remedies he has suggested because the successful ones in curing the disease, he should divide the credit of ~~it~~ <sup>them</sup> with the ~~physi-~~ <sup>his</sup> brother physician, and if ~~the case should~~ ~~terminate fatally~~ he should assume an equal share of responsibility to the patient's friends, and the public, if ~~it should~~ the disease should have a fatal issue. We return to take notice

<sup>by Thos</sup> §IV. Physicians should never ✓ change any thing for their attendance upon each other families, while they continue to exercise a common profession. ~~That~~ Thier

The obligation<sup>18</sup> to attend the families of physicians gratuitously, should cease as soon as they decline the practice of medicine, and devote themselves to other occupations.

V In all cases in which a physician <sup>is</sup> called to a sudden indisposition, or ~~any~~ an accident in a family in which he does not <sup>is</sup> attend, he should prescribe for the patient affected with them, and afterwards resign him to the family physician without making a charge for his visit. He should moreover

~~Physicians should~~ attend the habitual patients of <sup>his</sup> brethren, during their sickness, and absence from home, and surrender to them the profits of <sup>his</sup> services, upon their return, or recovery. —

VI ~~That~~ In Cases where a patient sends for a physician who has been under the care of another physician whom he wishes to discharge, it will be improper to visit him unless the first physician be retained, or unless the consent of the physician who is discharged, be first obtained.

Services should be alike gratuitous to their widows and children when they are left in reduced or very limited circumstances. ✓ ~~Consent of the physician who is discharged, to~~ ~~first obtained~~

VII Physicians should ~~supervise all other~~ cooperate in all plans for advancing the ~~solidity~~ profits of the profession, by uniformity of charges for the same services, by an equal duration of credit, and by the assisting each other in collecting their fees & debts. It is a common thing for young physicians to consult old ones by letter for advice in new and difficult cases. This should always be given ~~gratis~~ freely where the patients are poor, but where ~~this is not the~~ <sup>those</sup> ~~case~~ case, ~~these~~ letters should always be accompanied with a fee especially where the

[Faint, illegible handwritten text, likely bleed-through from the reverse side of the page.]

IV

I

Advice is asked at the request of the patient.
 This the obligation of this duty in young physicians to old ones is enforced by the study and labor that are required to answer letters for medical advice, by the time they abstract from <sup>profitable</sup> business, and in some cases by the fees received in this way it being the principal <sup>and</sup> ~~and~~ <sup>only</sup> ~~source~~ <sup>source</sup> = source of a physician in the earning of his life.

~~YET~~ ~~There remains to be mentioned but~~ ~~one duty, it is the duty of physicians to live~~ ~~in harmony with each other. One more~~ ~~duty which physicians owe to each other,~~ ~~we hear of a herculean task, of herculean~~ ~~labor, but we hear nothing of herculean~~ ~~virtue, and yet that kind of virtue is~~ ~~unhappy to carry into effect the duty that~~ ~~I allude to, and that is, to live in harmony~~ with all the members of <sup>their</sup> ~~the~~ profession.

I am aware of the obstacles to this duty, & that medical controversies, and medical hostilities are proverbial in ~~every~~ <sup>all</sup> countries.

To what cause shall we attribute this problem in morals, that men who ~~are~~ should be united together by ~~the~~ mutual studies, mutual labors, and sufferings; and whose hearts should from their familiarity with sickness and distress should always be attuned to kind-ness and justice, should be <sup>so</sup> generally the secret, and so often the <sup>open</sup> enemies of each other? - ~~Even private friendships are~~ ~~scarcely known among them.~~ It is true two or more of them <sup>sometimes</sup> ~~often~~ associate frequently together, but it is <sup>generally</sup> ~~often~~ for the purposes

V <sup>those rare</sup> ~~the few~~ instances in which there have been friendships between physicians it has been, (with a few exceptions) among those of <sup>only</sup> them who have lived at a distance from each other, or in cities so large as to prevent competition, or where they have been connected in business, or by ties of consanguinity.

VI ~~harmony in which~~ <sup>Clergy</sup> The ~~lawyers~~, the lawyers, the merchants, military men, and mechanics of the same occupations live <sup>in harmony</sup> with each other. The same remark applies to ~~some~~ species of brutes of the same species in every part parts of the world. — of forming partnerships in consultations, or of attaching a powerful medical antagonist with more success, or to defend themselves from his insolence or injustice. <sup>Friendships</sup> ~~There~~ has nothing to do with these combinations.

 They are <sup>merely</sup> ~~indefinite~~ defensive & offensive ~~local~~ alliances, and founded only in interest, malice, or a principle of self preservation. The difficulty of solving the problem I have mentioned is much increased by attending to the conduct of the members of other professions <sup>to each other.</sup> ~~The Gentlemen of the Law~~ <sup>lawyers</sup> deposit all their <sup>unkind</sup> ~~hostility to each other in this Court, and~~ ~~live together like friends and gentlemen.~~ ~~The friendly joke, or the pleasant anecdote~~ ~~they want for the instruments in settling~~ ~~the business of their dockets, the friendly~~

[Faint, illegible handwritten text, likely bleed-through from the reverse side of the page.]

22 <sup>descend lower</sup> But should we ~~pass~~ <sup>descend</sup> further, and open the gates of Sophocles, we should find in <sup>there</sup> the language of Milton, that ~~even~~ even

"Devils with devils, firm concord hold," to use the words of Milton, and thereby uniting with all the intelligent and animated <sup>clashes of creatures</sup> ~~beings~~ that have been mentioned, in reproaching physicians as ~~subverting~~ <sup>the only</sup> instances of beings of the same nature, and of the same pursuits, being enemies to each other.

Other I am aware that it may be said that there are records of the most <sup>in Biography</sup> ~~perfect~~ and disinterested, <sup>and durable</sup> friendships <sup>between the</sup> ~~existing~~ individual members of the profession. This is true, but it has generally been where they have lived at a distance from each other, or in cities so large, as ~~not~~ to prevent com-petition, or where they have been

Let him listen to the following Account of the manner in which the dispute was carried on some Centuries ago between a number of physicians, whether a Vein should be opened on the affected, or On the oppo-site side in a phlebotomy. Such says Dupui was the reason that this dispute inspired; that each party contended for their favorite practice as for their Altar, and each deemed their Opponents worthy to expiate their errors by fire & faggot. further

Let him ~~only~~ recollect, that Vesalius was driven from Paris into a foreign country, and Dr Harvey from <sup>expensive</sup> ~~various~~ & lucrative business in London im-mediately after their <sup>respective</sup> discoveries in anatomy and physiology by the hatred of their contemporary physicians, on ~~connected by business or the ties of consan-~~ ~~guinity~~ Hatred has been divided by the into four different kinds as related to certain professions or pursuits. They are ~~known~~ <sup>known</sup> by the following <sup>viz:</sup> the odium theologicum, latin epithets, ~~which shall not be here~~ the odium politicum, the odium philologi--cum, and the odium medicum. The last I believe is the most intense of any of them. If any one is disposed to doubt it, let him read in modern times ~~it~~ <sup>look at</sup> the controversies between the College of Physicians, and the licentiates of the City of London, - ~~look at~~ <sup>or</sup> ~~late~~ <sup>late</sup> the publications of John Bell and Dr. Gregory in Edinburgh, ~~at~~ <sup>or</sup> ~~at~~ the newspapers of the city of Philadelphia in the year 1794. You may form some judgment of the virulent contents of the last, when I add, that

... the history of man
to the "Opening of the mouth of hell" ~~against~~ ~~against one of the physicians of the city,~~ ~~and by a Clergyman from New England~~ and ~~to~~ the effects they were intended ~~and calculated~~ to produce upon him, were afterwards compared by a Clergyman in New England to "a medical crucifixion". No controversies upon theological, political, or philological subjects have I believe have ever produced such strong and characteristic allusions to illustrate the force of malice, and particularly from the lips [=]

they were compared by a Clergyman in the Delaware state to the "Opening of the mouth of hell," and the effects they were intended to produce to — but here I will stop the detail of the ferocious controversies of physicians, and proceed to analyze <sup>the</sup> disposition in the human mind, that produced them. ~~And~~ I shall begin by remarking that it is ~~to describe it. Allusions were borrowed from characteristic allusions to illustrate the force that produced these differences that have characteristic illustrations of value, the type represented in and particularly from of men accustomed to the latter nothing but the mild and benevolent doctrines precepts of the Gospel.~~

Let us analyze ~~this~~ the ~~quality~~ disposition ~~that~~ ~~produced these~~ the ~~propensity~~ that ~~these~~ suggested allusions, controversies, and suggested the allusions from ~~to what~~ and the ~~types~~ to describe that have been mentioned. It is operating constantly in Attempts to V ~~constantly~~ Detract from the business, or reputation of better physicians.

~~it is~~ ~~the~~ ~~briefly~~ ~~described~~ of a compound nature, and consists of two passions ~~con~~ acting sometimes separately, and again jointly in the human mind, ~~and~~ These are the love of money, & the love of fame, <sup>V</sup> the former has been called the root of all evil. ~~It is the bane of the~~ ~~land.~~ The latter has produced public and private <sup>cruelty and</sup> injustice and cruelty in all ages and countries. It has subverted kingdoms, and ~~the~~ enslaved nations, and crimsoned the half the water of our globe with blood, these are its public evils. In private life it has ~~and at the same time~~ consigned millions to of individuals to pine away their lives in broken many millions of individual hearts. — But why should physicians above all other classes of men be the depositaries of these <sup>baneful</sup> passions? They are made of the same parts of flesh to

... the history of man
V that should <sup>adorn</sup> ~~improve~~ them with personal virtues, and defile them with professional vices?

~~V The different tribes of Indians in our direct living bodies and pass their lives amidst the cries of butchered women & children, and yet they~~

N live together in a constant exchange of ~~kind and good~~ <sup>kind</sup> offices. The problem is a difficult one; but I shall endeavour to solve it.

What is there <sup>26</sup> in the Study and practice of medicine that should render them friendly to the members of all other professions, and hostile, only to the members of their own? — And that should unite such op-posite qualities in their characters as to be angels in a sick room, and gladiators ~~of~~ out of it? — Is it a habit of ~~dissecting dead bodies in early life~~ of insensibility contracted by dissecting dead bodies in early life, & increased afterwards by a familiarity with pain & ~~dissection~~ <sup>dissection</sup>? By no means. The different tribes of Indians in our country dissect living bodies with their <sup>instruments of death</sup> ~~tomahawks~~, and pass their lives amidst the cries of butchered women & children, & yet they ~~yet they~~ live in harmony with each other? It is to be ascribed to ~~their~~ <sup>their</sup> living habits, more general prevalence of infidelity, and <sup>of</sup> contempt of the precepts of the Gospel, <sup>by physicians</sup> than <sup>by</sup> other men?

— No — this is not the case. Lawyers and military gentlemen who are ~~perhaps~~ <sup>even</sup> ~~perhaps~~ ~~more~~ equally indifferent to the truths and precepts of Revelation, and ✓ The Clergy often meet in Conventions and Synods, and relax themselves from their labor in the ~~the~~ hospitable Society of their lay brethren. The lawyers ~~meet~~ meet often at the bar, and in the recess of their Courts, ~~meet~~ frequently at each other's tables. The merchants meet daily at ~~the~~ <sup>a</sup> Coffee houses <sup>or an</sup> ~~exchange~~ exchange, and often at private and public ~~dinner~~ <sup>entertainments</sup>. Military men meet frequently on the same parade, and daily at the same mess. So closely are these gentlemen united, that they seldom speak of each other but as brethren, and it a fact not generally known in the history of that Clasp of arms in the British Army, when any one falls in battle, his cloathes, and ~~often~~ other effects when sold, bring double and triple their Value, from a desire which each Officer feels to possess something that shall constantly remind him <sup>beneficial</sup> of his departed brother. But the ~~social~~ <sup>and convivial</sup> beneficial effects of ~~the~~ social ~~and~~ <sup>convivial</sup> intercourse ~~do to do~~ extend still further. The peaceful dispositions of the gregarious animals appear

Man has been defined by the ancient Greeks to be a political, or social Animal. All his happiness, and most of his virtues are derived from his intercourse with his fellow creatures. It is from the constant operation of this social principle, that the Clergy, the lawyers, the merchants, the military men and the mechanics live in harmony with each other. Their professions and occupations are all gregarious, <sup>by</sup> which means they are associated necessarily in business, and naturally in convivial society.

✓ <sup>to be derived</sup> in a great measure from their feeding together in the same pasture, or in the same stable, or under the same shed. This supposition <sup>is rendering still more probable by pressing</sup> the hostile dispositions of those animals to each other, and to all others, that feed alone. Devils ~~that~~ <sup>are</sup> ~~live in harmony with each other~~ it is true are not united by convivial ties, but they ~~are~~ <sup>Thier</sup> harmony is derived wholly from their being gregarious. They trust, they seduce, and they do mischief in companies. This is evident from many parts of scripture, and particularly from the history of the two men that dwelt among the tombs in the country of the gadarines. They were possessed not by ~~one~~ <sup>one</sup> ~~possessions~~ but by a "legion" of devils.

30 and V at the same table, ~~generally~~ partake of a part of the flesh of of the same animal, of a ~~part~~<sup>portion</sup> of the same loaf of bread, of vegetables cultivated in the same garden, and of wine expressed from the same grape. become the subjects <sup>by</sup> of a kind of physical affinity blood of blood, flesh ~~and~~ of flesh, and bone of ~~bone~~<sup>bone</sup> ~~for several days or perhaps~~ of each other for days or perhaps weeks. Afterwards. This is not mere speculation. The sentiment is deeply grounded in human nature as will appear from the following fact. Two gentlemen dined with a physician in London who told them many ~~wonderful~~<sup>incredible</sup> stories of his extensive ~~and~~<sup>business</sup> successful practice. On their way home, one of them took notice to the other of the improb-
- ability of the stories they had heard. "Stop - stop said (said his <sup>companion</sup>) let us wait till all his wine has passed out of our bodies before we abuse him." But there ~~is~~<sup>are other</sup> ~~at a convivial table~~ of persons who sit down <sup>at the same</sup> ~~at a~~ convivial society of the Union of friends, table.
An anecdotal -

The effects of convivial society, or what Sir Thomas Brown calls "commensality" require a more specific particular consideration.
A Scotch Merchant formerly of this city after having lived

many years at lodgings, took a house, and furnished it, in a comfortable and being asked the reason for changing his manner of living he said. "I have done it in order to entertain my Customers, for there is nothing <sup>that</sup> unites men to men like eating & drinking together?" The experience of all rational, and even the institutions of the world of the Jewish and Christian Religions, suggest at once suggest, and establish the truth of this remark. ~~Even who sit down~~ <sup>Even who sit down</sup> ~~at the table~~ <sup>at the table</sup> coincidence of opinion upon different subjects; comes:

-proving anecdotes, and mutual good offices in conveying the different articles that cover the table, to each <sup>other</sup> all com-
-pire to produce a relationship of mind as well of body.
Cold and depressed indeed must that heart be, that is not united with its associates under such kind & attrac-ting circumstances. History furnishes us with an account of but one man who was capable of resisting them. ~~This man was a man who was capable of resisting~~ <sup>This man was a man who was capable of resisting</sup> ~~and depravity, immediately after supping with a friend. His~~ <sup>and depravity, immediately after supping with a friend. His</sup> ~~name and his crime are recorded in the new testament.~~ <sup>name and his crime are recorded in the new testament.</sup>

✓ to have been in daily use among the heathen Nations, that infected them with their Vices, for experience has proved that those Aliments are perfectly wholesome in similar Climates, & to per= sons in the same state of Society.

But convivial Society ~~possesses~~ <sup>not only a</sup> ~~physical and moral~~ <sup>but a prospective</sup> retrospective, ~~influence upon the~~ <sup>temper of men.</sup> ~~acts~~ <sup>the</sup> ~~propagation~~ <sup>of</sup> moral ~~actions~~ <sup>actions</sup> Where meetings for that purpose are faithfully attended, the <sup>constant expectation</sup> ~~prospect~~ of them is calculated to ~~prevent~~ <sup>sentiments and</sup> feelings of Unkindness to the persons with whom we are <sup>shortly</sup> to sit down at the same table, and whom we expect to address with the usual expressions of civility & respect.

31
This moral influence of Criminal Society is strongly illustrated under certain circumstances, by its contrary effects. It was one of the causes of the corrup-tion and Vices of the Children of Israel in their journey through the wilderness, and it was probably to prevent its future and more extensive operation that Moses commanded the Jews to abstain from hogs flesh, and sundry other articles of animal food which appear V

I have thus gentlemen endeavored to point out the causes of the harmony which subsists
- ~~between~~ among the members of the different pro-
- fessions and occupations of men <sup>and</sup> ~~in~~ which restrain within just and honourable bounds, the same passions for wealth and fame that produce the dissensions of physicians. I have likewise <sup>endeavored to show</sup> ~~been stating~~ the influence of those causes in promoting harmony among other classes of beings. In this attempt I hope I have discovered the true ~~causes~~ <sup>only cause</sup> of the hostility of physicians to each other.

V delineate the knowledge ~~and contents~~ of new publications, — of prevailing diseases, — of ~~difficult cases, &c~~ new remedies, and of obtaining the aid of multiplied experience in difficult cases, but they ~~hostility to each other~~ <sup>evil I believe</sup> The ~~disease~~ is not an incurable one. I shall proceed <sup>with great</sup> means <sup>for destroying it.</sup> ~~for destroying it.~~ pleasure to suggest ~~Remedies~~ <sup>for destroying it.</sup> —

These are,

1 Frequent meetings for the purposes of medical conversation. This will be far more useful than meetings in societies in which business is conducted agreeably to the forms of legislative bodies, and where that business consists chiefly in balloting for members, making or altering Bye laws, ~~and~~ <sup>and</sup> collecting fines, and settling treasurer's accounts. The Advantages of such meetings for conversation <sup>would</sup> be very great <sup>if they</sup> ~~as they~~ <sup>only</sup> ~~as they~~ <sup>only</sup> ~~embraced~~ <sup>embraced</sup> ~~critical~~ <sup>critical</sup> subjects, but ~~only~~ contributed to diffuse ~~some critical subjects knowledge~~ <sup>will extend much further. They will</sup> ~~but they~~ <sup>will abstract the Attention that gets an</sup>

V are sometimes excited by the discussion of ~~public~~ questions upon what the french call "civil Medicine" in public newspapers; They will wear away the gloom, and asperity of temper which are often contracted by our familiarity with

~~lastly they will abstract the attention~~ the distresses of our patients, or by their impatience and injustice, both of which often discover themselves in our conduct to our brethren; and <sup>lastly</sup> they will favour the explanation of a real or imaginary offence that may have been given to a brother practitioner without leaving it to fester in ~~the~~ Mind =

inordinate and unjust love of money & fame, for they ~~promote a general & more intimate acquaintance~~ are both solitary vices. They will promote a more intimate acquaintance of physicians with each other than can be acquired in consultations, or interviews in a street or upon the great road. They will ~~destroy~~ <sup>destroy</sup> those prejudices which ~~are naturally felt to against~~ ~~are so often the result of a long acquaintance~~
 - they will wear away the gloom & asperity of temper which ~~is often~~ <sup>are often</sup> contracted by our familiarity with the distresses, or by the ingratitude and ~~the result of a long acquaintance~~ <sup>ing notice of our patients,</sup> both of which ~~are~~ <sup>often</sup> discovered ~~in our~~ <sup>themselves</sup> ~~conduct to our brethren; and if any~~ <sup>they will</sup> ~~give the explanations of real or imaginary~~ ~~offences that may have been~~ <sup>if any</sup> ~~practitioners, it may be explained, & so~~ ~~be without being left to fester in the mind~~ Until it ends in an incurable fore. These meetings should be weekly in all cities and large towns, and monthly, or quarterly in all country places according to their extent.

that
V that <sup>a</sup> number of physicians meeting, ~~and sitting down once as was leaving this~~ having their professional habits & characters at home, and ~~sitting~~ meeting & sitting down <sup>as</sup> at the same table once a month, or often, <sup>as fellow citizens,</sup> and ~~looking back with delight upon~~ ~~the classic ground~~ as friends, <sup>as</sup> Scholars, and as Gentlemen, and looking back with delight at the classic ground over which they walked in early life, or rambling with modern travellers over the native cities of and Countries of Religion and Science in the Eastern World, or contemplating with a philosophic and Sympathizing eye the folly of governments, the rage of parties, the enmity of nations, and the distresses of war, and finally, <sup>shopending</sup> all public and private <sup>care</sup> in a few glasses of wine. Such convivial =

2: Let as much commercial intercourse be kept up between physicians as possible.
~~I know it is difficult for them to do this in~~ ~~their houses. They must for some <sup>the</sup> hours~~ ~~of eating <sup>their meals</sup> being more exposed to the calls of~~ ~~patients than any others, ~~that~~ it will~~ ~~be difficult for them to do this in their~~ ~~own houses without neglecting either their~~ ~~business or their company, for which rea-~~ ~~son they should associate occasionally on~~ ~~at stated times at a public or a private~~ ~~house, <sup>and dine or sup</sup> together <sup>at a public</sup> ~~the latter will~~~~ ~~or private house. The latter should be~~ ~~preferred, from its being most favourable~~ ~~to retirement, and economy. I can~~ ~~scarcely imagine a sight more agreeable~~ ~~than that of a number of physicians~~ ~~meeting and sitting down <sup>to a meal</sup>~~

✓ In such Societies the heart "never distrusts - and never ceases if this be joy." —

thrice, or once a month at the same place, talking over the ~~phases~~ <sup>the distresses and</sup> labors, the folio: ~~the phases and the distresses of~~ the intervals <sup>between</sup> of their meetings, comparing their respective ~~successes and failures~~ <sup>cures and deaths in</sup> their practice, assisting each other by their advice in rendering the <sup>labors of the</sup> profession easy & profitable, and ~~convincing~~ <sup>proving</sup> every thing disagreeable in it in a few glasses of wine. Such convivial societies have existed among physicians in other countries ~~as long~~ <sup>as long</sup> much to the credit of ~~the science of medicine~~ <sup>our profession</sup>. They existed occasionally and partially in this city before the American Revolution. I can recollect few events of my life with more pleasure than the meetings I spent when a young man in that kind of company.
 The advantages of such <sup>professional & convivial</sup> meetings would be extensive in their operation.

in the <sup>22</sup> 36 they would place to ~~ourselves~~ by affording us moral pleasure. Much intellectual and moral pleasure. The knowledge we derive from conversation is <sup>generally more practical</sup> ~~not so perfect~~ than that we acquire ~~from books~~ with more ease than from books, and the knowledge! peace! - friendship! - How much are included in those pregnant words! - and yet, all that is contained in them, <sup>would</sup> be ours. —

2 They would increase the profits of our profession by bestowing more confidence in it, and thereby to induce sick people to send for us more early and more generally, and to reward us more liberally for our services.

3 They would render the ~~professions~~ individual of the profession more reputable in the eyes of the public. ~~by instead of entering the sick~~ ~~rooms of our patients like gladiators armed~~ ~~with the trophies of successful practice, or~~

V of interesting our patients, or the public in our professional prejudices & resentments, we should appear to them, as the deputies of Heaven, commissioned to guard the health and lives of our fellow citizens.

From the view of that has been taken of the profession of medicine, I should feel disposed publicly to acknowledge my shame in being a member of it, did I not recollect that it <sup>has been</sup> ~~has~~ exercised by Hanley, Sydenham, Boerhaave, Hottelungill, Cullen, and Vleberden, who have conferred a dignity upon it by their splendid talents and virtues that can never be lessened by the follies or vices of any of its members.

37 be welcomed by resentment, we should ~~come~~ <sup>be welcomed by</sup> ~~with us~~ ~~them as the Angels of peace as bright as of~~ ~~health and life.~~ - we should ~~come~~ <sup>by these means</sup> ~~these~~ cease to be mere physicians, <sup>and</sup> ~~but appear~~ ~~to them as~~ <sup>as real</sup> ~~more~~ <sup>as real</sup> ~~populists~~ of social ~~habits~~ <sup>virtues</sup> in common with the rest of mankind. Instead of mowing ~~lives~~ <sup>lives</sup> from a solitary den every morning in quest of prey ~~denied from~~ <sup>furnished by</sup> the ~~poisonous~~ <sup>Sickness & pains</sup> ~~distresses~~ <sup>of our</sup> fellow creatures, we should emerge with the habits of <sup>general civility</sup> ~~of~~ <sup>kindness</sup> ~~of our~~ acquired by social intercourse; and instead of ~~containing~~ <sup>containing</sup> ~~the~~ <sup>the</sup> ~~lives~~ <sup>lives</sup> ~~of our patients,~~ <sup>of our patients,</sup> ~~like gladiators~~ <sup>by showing them the trophies</sup> ~~covered with the trophies~~ with the history of our exploits of mountaint in our professional resentments and prejudices, ~~and make~~ <sup>we should appear to them as the</sup> ~~Deputies of heaven~~ <sup>Deputies of heaven</sup> ~~commissioned to guard the~~ ~~Angels of peace, as well as of health & life~~ <sup>lives</sup> of our fellow citizens from the view that has been given of the profession of medicine, I should

V to the ~~illustrations~~ physicians whose <sup>names</sup> I have ~~mentioned~~, I feel myself impelled to rise from my Chair as a mark of my respect <sup>and affection</sup> for their characters. Illustrations benefactors of mankind! — = even in the humblest way thollen, & a Lothergill ~~not to be ashamed of~~ ~~it~~ ~~or~~ ~~ever~~ ~~to be ashamed of it.~~ ~~or~~ ~~rather~~ ~~want~~ ~~to feel~~ ~~a consciousness~~

~~of elevation~~ ~~now~~ ~~in reflecting that I have~~ ~~the honor upon it~~ ~~ashamed of it~~ ~~did I~~ ~~say?~~ ~~no - gentlemen,~~ ~~and yet I~~ ~~that~~ ~~disposal~~

~~Do not say I partake of their honor.~~

= A Clergyman who visited Italy some years ago ~~recollected~~ ~~for~~ ~~his~~ ~~health~~ and who ~~recollected~~ ~~in~~ ~~riding~~ ~~over~~ ~~the~~ ~~apennine~~ way, that on that very road the Apostle Paul had been ~~led~~ ~~is~~ ~~conducted~~ ~~a~~ ~~prisoner~~ by a Guard of Soldiers to Rome, ~~and~~ ~~sub-~~ denly got out of his carriage, and walked to the ~~remaining~~ ~~part~~ ~~of~~ ~~his~~ ~~journey~~ ~~with~~ his head uncovered. With equal reverence to ~~those illustrious~~ ~~persons~~ ~~I~~ ~~feel~~ ~~disposed~~ impelled ~~to~~ ~~rise~~ ~~from~~ ~~my~~ ~~chair~~ ~~while~~ ~~I~~ ~~do~~ ~~so~~ as a mark of my regret and affection for their characters. ~~Do~~ do ~~encourage~~ ~~to~~ ~~their~~ ~~talents~~ ~~&~~ ~~virtues~~ illustrious benefactors of mankind! ~~By~~

~~have imparted a dignity to the profession~~ ~~of medicine that can never be aspired by~~ ~~the follies or vices of any of its members. =~~

By the Splendor of <sup>40</sup> your talents ~~you and~~ ~~virtues~~ ~~you &~~ ~~that for so long~~ ~~have obscured every thing that~~ ~~is little~~ ~~and by the~~ ~~greater~~ ~~proximity~~ ~~of the latter,~~ ~~virtues, your~~ ~~that~~ ~~they have~~ ~~cannot~~ ~~be~~ ~~apologized~~ ~~for~~ ~~every thing~~ visions in ~~our~~ ~~professions~~ — Benefactors of ~~manhood~~ ~~let~~ ~~you~~ ~~the~~ ~~profession~~ ~~of~~ ~~manhood~~ Receive from this distant part of the Globe, at this remote period of time, and from this temple of Science, the homage of our gratitude for your labors and examples, ~~and~~ both of which we shall endeavour to cherish, and to transmit with ~~and~~ increasing honor to the latest posterity.

Gentlemen! — My time of life ~~brings~~ ~~me to look beyond the lapse of three or~~ ~~four years~~ ~~for~~ often reminds me that I must soon cease to be the tenant of the Chair I now occupy in this University: It is certain

I cannot hold it more than a few years, & it is possible the time may be much shorter.

But were I sure, this would be the last introductory lecture I should ever deliver, my parting Advice to you should be, "treat all the members of your profession with justice, ~~kind~~ civility and brotherly kindness, and ~~keep up~~ cultivate medical and convivial intercourse with each other, <sup>as the means of peace and harmony,</sup> in every situation in which you may be placed, and in every part of your future lives."

(afr)

